West Hilltop District Description

The West Hilltop District, formerly the site of the Robinson Court housing project, was acquired by the University in 2008. Like the Hilltop District, it features some of the highest elevations on the Pitt campus. Since the 2008 IMP, the entire district has been developed into the Petersen Sports Complex.

University Owned Buildings

Petersen Sports Complex

The Petersen Sports Complex, designed by L. Robert Kimball and Associates and completed in 2011, includes three a competition/practice venue for baseball, softball and soccer. In addition, the complex includes a two-story, 23,000-square-foot support building that houses locker rooms for each sport as well as dedicated equipment and athletic training facilities.

Civic Realm Inventory

The West Hilltop District is similar in character to the Hilltop District and provides contiguous space for the University's athletic and recreation programs.

Urban Design Guidelines

Development on this site will provide facilities to support the existing playing fields which will remain. Development within the district should be compliant with the General Urban Design Guidelines and should be compatible with the character, scale and materials of the existing facility.
